NEWTON D. BAKER STILL TALKS

In an account of a visit paid by the Secretary of War to Camp of Ohlo. Ills long and distinguished Sherman at Chillicothe, Ohio, published in The Herald Wednesday, military career began at West Polat the 12th, Mr. Baker is quoted as saying:

"On belialf of the War Department, I want to turn over to you this great trust of curing for these men." "It is a trust I feel, and I believe you feel, cannot be overeslimuted the caring for the thousands who, like us, have had this thing thrust upon them almost overnight, and who, like most of us, are strangers to things military."

How can a mun of sufficient intelligence to be a War Minister of a great nation in this world crisis still state that the war came to us graduation from both institutions suddenly?

Every citizen of America had warning for two and a half years that there was probability of our being forced into the war. Not even the Secretary of War could have escaped the knowledge that there was, as expressed by President Wilson nearly two years ago, "a world conflagration, and a danger of sparks from that conflagration being curried to our shores to kindle here the flames of wur.'

Yet after those bloody months of warning the Secretary of War, two months after the declaration of war, proclaimed that there "is disorder and confusion, but it is a happy confusion." and then expressed his "delight" that we were not prepared for war.

Now, five months and more after the declaration of war, seven months after the breaking of diplomutic relations, two years and a half after the sinking of the Lusitania, this unconscionable poscur still attempts to erente a smoke cloud behind which he may hide the inefficiency of the War Department by saying that the war was thrust upon us almost overnight. He, however, for once tells the tenth when he indiente that he and those for whom he speaks "are strangers to things military."

A silk purse cannot be made out of a sow's ear; a skeep cannot lead no nrmy of lions; a hulf baked socialistic pucifist without the instinct of the fighting man, or the mental honesty of the convugeous man, cannot face nor master the problems involved in the vast war of the world,

Never in all the history of mankind was there a greater tragedy than our failure to be prepared to play our part. Had it not been for the criminal act of the War Department in demobilizing the National Guard after the severing of diplomatic relations with Germany, it would have been possible to have sent the force trained on the Mexican border, expanded to twice its size, to Enrope carly in the summer. We could already have had a half million men to aid France and Belginm and England. But even now, five months after the deelaration of war, Quartermaster General Sharp testifies before the House Committee on Appropriations that it will be impossible to fully equip more than a hundred and fifty thousand of the draft before No

Dill-dallying, shilly-shallying, beginning to get ready to prepare to start to equip an army, the news from France of the difficulties in the formation of a new cabinet, the news from Russia of the civil war that is imminent, the news from England of the seduction of Arthur Henderson and his co-workers by the socialistic agitators being used by Germany in its propaganda for peace, all emphasize the dire need for our fighting force in France. There is no persistency, no consistency in the policies of the War Department, nor will there ever be as long as Newton Buker is Secretary of Wur,

We take from Collier's Weekly an editorial indicating the hopelessness of expecting any real effective work by the Secretary of War, and the need for speed, which is a word unknown to the Sceretary of War in preparing for war.

"The War College Division earnestly recommends that no American troops be employed in active service in any European theatre until after an adequate period of training, and that during this period all....the regular nrmy or National Guard be employed in training the new levies . . . . Cooperation between the United States and the Entente Allies has not yet been so far planned as that any decision has been reached upon the subject of sending an expeditionary force." These sentences and their crazy impliention that we ought to send no troops till ready to send all our troops have an ancient sound now, yet they were written so recently as April 13, forming part of a letter from Secretary of War Baker to Theodore Roosevelt. Fortunately for our chances in the present war and in the future, the "earnest" urgings of the elderly gentlemen who compose the War College Division at Washington were in due time overridden. It is hard to imagine jast what the plum of our undermanued War College was for America's part in the war, but it is pretty clear that the elderly gentlemen saw if as a purely technical problem, rather than us a problem parily technical, partly human. What follows comes to us in a private letter from France. It is written by an American volunteer serving with a French artillery regiment: 'Isn't America more interested in turning out a swell lire brigade than in putting out the fire? And the fire is raging, believe nac. And aren't we also making the fatal mistake of plunning for a three-year's war, just like the English? The French have already borne the brnut of the fighting for three years. They can't keep it up for six. Speed, Speed, SPEED: that should be our motto back home, . and death to political prejudices and fads."

Defective ammunition sent with the armful of men under General Pershing; failure to prepare our troops to he sent until the submarine warfare has diminished the number of ships; no possibility of sending the National Army for fully a year after the declaration of war, there has as yet been no indication that it is possible for Newton Baker to realize that the one and only test of our capacity to prosecute this war successfully is to have fighting men in Europe

And for him to go about the country prating about being surprised and confessing that he and his conferes "are strangers to and his work at Ewing during the things military" proves that not yet has he realized, nor will ever past two years, has been very satisrealize, the duties of a War Minister in a real wur.

As the organizer of a force for ping pang, or a team for croquet. or to get up a contest for mumble-the-peg he would be a howling sucess. But us a War Minister he is a trugic fuilure. No mun arrested as un I, W.W. has done or can ever do one-tenth the dumuge to the American army, nor cause so great loss of life and treasure as has Newton D. Baker, who still by the grace of the President remains as War Minister.-Lexington Herald,

At a meeting of the directing committee of the Corn and Tobacco Fair it was definitely settled that the 1917 'nir will be held in the Liberty Warehouse, where it was held last year SHIP, FIT, COLOR, WEARING AND Although several of the other warehouse companies offered their buildings it was decided that the Liberty was tire best fitted for the fair and would be plenty large enough.

The countract for decorating the building was awarded to the William Beck & Sons Company, this firm had

The Secretary was instructed to communicate with some of the best bands in an enieavor to find out who were available at the time of the falr.

Messrs, E. T. Kirk, E. Frank Boyd ind A. M. Casey were appointed a committee to pian the exhibition and premium list for the agricultural and obacco departments, and Messrs. George Dodson and H. P. Purncli were appointed a committee to plan exhibits and premium list for the poultry department which promises to bo a big feature of the falr.

The Secretary was also instructed to communicate with the State authorities and notify them of the acceptance of their offer to make a "Good Roads" display if the fulr committee would furnish the booth.

From here it looks as though the big 1917 Corn and Tobaceo Fair wili be one of the blggest things ever attempted in this section of the coun-
